Milligan Farm (site)
Federalsburg
Private

Early 19th Century

The dwelling which formerly stood on this farm was burned several years ago but a photo does exist in the office of the Maryland Historical Trust. It appears to have had a plan similar to Garey House and Tuckahoe Acres on Tuckahoe Neck, but the roof was all on about the same level. Probably the roof of the east wing had been raised after its original construction. This plan persists throughout Talbot and Caroline Counties during the early 19th Century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Milligan Farm, or Dr. Noble Farm house formerly stood on the Federalsburg-Preston Road near the Willis House. Photos were taken of the house in 1970 which reveals a two story frame building about five bays long (seven openings on first floor). Its west side stood on a brick foundation while the east side was built on brick piers. The west chimney was built within the house with exposed back to the second story level, and the east chimney was a pyramidal pile on the exterior. The entire structure was covered with asbestos siding and plain weatherboard beneath. The roof was continuous and between the two parts was a third chimney stack. All of the windows had 6/6 sash.

The plan for the west part was stair hall and living room. Its stair was typical of the second quarter of the 19th century, a handmade country stair predating the machine made type of balustrades. The entire dwelling probably dated from this period but has been heightened late in the 19th century or early 20th.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Little is known of the owners of this site. The dwelling was of interest because of the scarcity of original early 19th century dwellings in Caroline. It is the site of human habitation and could possibly be of importance to future archeological investigation in Caroline.
